Author of
This is Our Time: Everyday Myths in Light of the Gospel

“When we feel uncertain and confused about our rapidly changing society, we lack confidence in the gospel and in the power of the church.
Many of us wonder: Are we truly up to the task of being faithful in this time?”
– Trevin Wax

- Tell us about your choice of your book title: This is Our Time. Many Christians are feeling less powerful and influential within culture this year – what do you say to these believers?
- You begin and end This is Our Time with poignant stories about your Romanian father-in-law, Florin. Tell us why he made such an impact on your faith and life.
- Your book outlines everyday myths our culture teaches us. Why do you believe your smart phone is a myth-teller? How does technology impact our hearts and minds?
- What are the stories we tell ourselves about wealth, possessions, status and success?
- How have Christians bought into the lie: “Will I be happier with more stuff?”
- You write that Hollywood and Bible are after the same thing. What is that shared goal?
- What are the three “maps” every person is trying discover?
- What is the problem with Christianity being seen as only a “private” part of life?
- Why do you believe there are so many myths people – and Christians – believe about marriage?
- Why do you believe that sex is neither everything nor nothing, but a sign?
- Why is it important to acknowledge the myth of progress and the myth of decline in the history of the world?
- How do you hope Christians will respond to This is Our Time?
