

Suggested Interview Questions for Susie Larson Author of Your Powerful Prayers

*"If we want to be powerful in prayer, we must spend our lives learning to accept how fiercely God loves us."
--Susie Larson*

- You write that powerful prayer begins and ends with a deeper understanding of God's love for us. How does love make us bold in prayer?
- How has your personal prayer life evolved over the course of your life?
- When you speak to groups about a Christian's identity in Christ, you often display an "heir" table and an "orphan" table at the front of the room. What do these tables represent for a Christian? How do these two perspectives impact our prayers?
- Disappointment can pack a punch and leave us breathless. How can we adjust perspective when life's disappointments threaten to steal our hope?
- You share a story of a particularly difficult Mother's Day, when you were heartbroken over sons who had wandered away from God. What stories from scripture helped you adjust your perspective and pray with endurance?
- Describe how prayer is woven into your daily routine – at established times and at unexpected times.
- Your Facebook feed publishes a blessing every morning and evening, and you've published a couple books filled with blessings. Are these blessings a type of intercessory prayer?
- What can a Christian do to revive a lapsed prayer life? Are there ways to bring new beauty and joy into our prayer practices? (Bountiful Blessings is Susie's new devotional coloring book)
- As Christ-followers, how do we pull ourselves out of our small stories – and focus on the bigger story unfolding? Where do we find this healthy perspective in scripture?
- What about miracles? Should we pray for what seems impossible? For how long?
- Why do you believe the combination of humility and boldness is irresistible to God?
